MOKENA VILLAGE BOARD
ADOPTS NEW MAIN
EXTENSION PLAN

The Mokena village board has gone on record to adopt a new system for water main extensions, patterned along the lines of a system in vogue in Aurora and Plainfield.

The plan provides that if a sub-divider or a group of residents seek to have the water mains extended to their respective properties, they petition the city or village council and pay for the material, pipe and labor of the main extension, but the water mains so extended remain the property of the municipality and the extension work is done under the supervision of the village engineer. The municipality in turn reimburses the property owners by applying their water bills on the cost of the extension until the cost of the improvement is paid, after which the water revenue again goes to the village. The purpose of the plan is to encourage the building of new homes and the real estate tax which the municipality receives from the new homes more than off sets any water revenue loss sustained for a few years.

The first petition received and acted on under the set up in Mokena was that of Everett J. Cooper who is building several new homes in the northeast side of Mokena.

Complaints Rile
Mokena Mayor

The Mokena village board meeting was enlivened Tuesday evening when Mayor Harry F. Mall engaged in a verbal clash with Robert Gaddis and Albert Hentsch when the latter brought complaints against the Robinson Tavern, charging violations of the closing hour law and a noisy soft ball diamond with the games running from 11 to 12 o'clock mid-night, making it impossible for the complainants to get any sleep. Both leave early in the morning to go to work. The complaints also charged that window were being broken and that the players trampled down gardens in chasing after balls batted into the complainants yards. The same complaints were made at the last board meeting and the board ordered the village clerk to notify the Robinson's and ask them to abate the trouble complained of and to obey the closing hour law. Both Mr. Gaddis and Mr. Hentsch charge this has not been done.

Mayor Mall felt that the whole affair was a neighborhood quarrel and did not feel the board should mix in it, but finally he did insist that the closing hour should be observed, but if the time was run over a few minutes it would be overlooked.

Fred Robinson also appeared before the board and heard the complaints and promised faithfully to obey the village ordinance regarding the closing of taverns at 12 mid-night on week days and one o'clock Saturday nights. He said the ball games complained of started late because teams coming from a distance were often delayed in getting here on time.

The complainants feel however, that their protests fell on deaf ears and that they received very little consideration. It is to be hoped that the matter will be peacefully settled, so that no drastic action will be required to compel observance of the law.

Study New Plan For Interstate Trade Barriers

WASHINGTON.—Interstate trade barriers are being lowered. Many state legislatures this year prevented the raising of new economic barriers to trade between the states, and some legislatures pulled down old barriers. Action was principally in the South, where Kentucky is now the only state having a maximum trucking load limit of only 18,000 pounds, gross weight. Elsewhere the load limit has been raised to 30,000 pounds or more.

Texas had a law requiring that the net loads on trucks could not exceed 7,000 pounds if the truck was to go past a railroad station. The load could be 14,000 pounds if the truck was going only to the nearest railroad. This law has been repealed, and the load limit raised to 38,000 pounds, gross weight. . . . Alabama raised the load limit from 20,000 to 30,000 pounds.

Tennessee had a 10 cent tax on margarine. Now the tax applies only to margarine made of foreign oils. . . . Mississippi has repealed its tax on retailers of margarine in that state. . . . In New England, the states have initiated uniform rules on the movement of cattle with respect to Bang's disease. . . . The story everywhere reveals a trend against trade barriers since the U. S. department of agriculture began its campaign against these barriers two years ago.

A special report issued by the bureau of agricultural economics in 1939—Barriers to Internal Trade in Farm Products—called attention to the rapid growth of discriminatory laws and regulations which have the effect of interstate tariffs and embargoes. The report showed that such laws and regulations are interfering seriously with the free movement and sale of farm products, raising the cost of marketing, increasing prices of food and clothing to the consumer, and lowering the consumption of these products.

Serious Trade Barriers.

Studies by a number of federal and state agencies have confirmed the bureau's findings, and have brought to light the existence of many serious trade barriers which were not covered in the bureau's report. At the 1939 sessions of the state legislatures many proposed additions to state barriers were blocked. This year—in 1941—when more than 40 state legislatures met, additional barriers were blocked or torn down.

"The removal of interstate trade barriers has become an important national issue," according to F. V. Waugh of the bureau of agricultural economics. "Farmers, dealers and consumers throughout the country want to see our marketing laws and regulations overhauled in such a way as to permit free trade without sacrificing any of the legitimate purposes of regulations. These legitimate purposes include the protection of public health, the prevention of the spread of insect pests and diseases, and the protection of highways from excessive damage."

Threaten Defense Program.

Mr. Waugh says, "There are some practical possibilities for eliminating the worst of the trade barriers in agriculture. State commissioners of agriculture with whom some of these possibilities were discussed last December were very interested. Many of the state commissioners of agriculture believe that if federal and state officials could agree on a program there would be a real possibility of getting the necessary federal and state legislation this year. Also, that inasmuch as trade barriers represent an obvious threat to our defense program, now is an opportune time to push legislation for freer interstate trade."

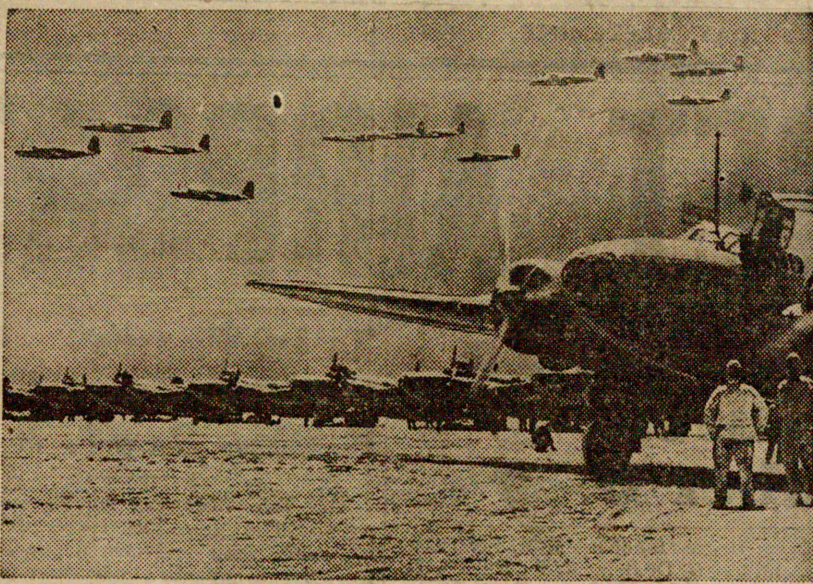

Until about 25 years ago, non-uniform grades for farm products presented many serious trade barrier problems. For example, wheat which had been inspected and certified as to grade in the producing state might not be acceptable in markets outside the state. Potatoes rated as No. 1 grade in one market might be called No. 2 in another market and sold there at a discount. During the past 25 years this situation has been improved greatly through a program developed and carried out jointly by the federal and state departments of agriculture.

This program has accomplished two things: (1) It has brought about gradually more and more uniformity in the standards and grades used throughout the country; (2) It has provided an inspection service whose certificates of quality are accepted as passports in interstate commerce. A certificate showing that a carload of potatoes has been inspected and is up to the U. S. No. 1 standard is now accepted in any part of the country as an indication of the actual quality.

This standardization and certification service has virtually eliminated trade barriers that once existed because of differences in grading requirements and in inspection techniques for some of the principal agricultural products. Mr. Waugh suggests a similar program of federal-state co-operation to deal with other aspects of trade barriers.

Federal studies have shown that sanitary laws and regulations have set up a number of monopolistic and discriminatory trade barriers which restrict milk and cream sheds, raise prices to consumers,

Japanese War Birds Wing Towards China

The Nipponese bombers in the air, as shown in the above picture, location not given, are outward bound on a raid over Chinese positions, held by troops of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, according to Japanese military authorities. Hundreds of ships similar to the one shown in this fleet are reported being flown into new bases, by the Japs, for possible use in French Indo-China territory. Here, it is believed, is the section the little brown men will use as a springboard for possible attack on Singapore and the Dutch East Indies.

Japanese Empire Exports Little—Imports Heavily

The Japanese empire comprises four principal islands, the combined area of which, 147,701 square miles, is less than that of California. The northern-most, Hokkaido, is about the same size as Maine. The main island, Honshu, is larger in square miles than Minnesota. The southern-most island of the main group, Kyushu, is somewhat larger than the combined areas of Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut. Shikoku, which encloses the Inland sea, is not as large as New Jersey.

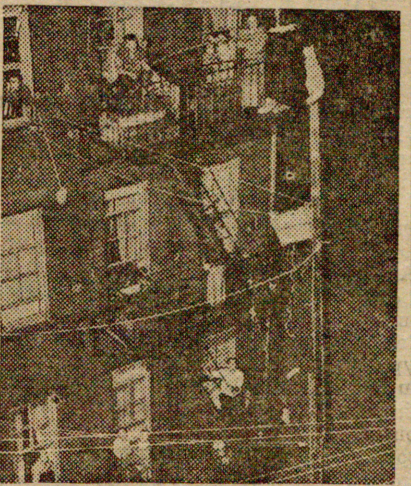

Including Taiwan (Formosa), Chosen (Korea), Kwantung Leased Territory, Bokoto (Pescadores) and the Mandated islands, the Japanese empire occupies an area of 260,704 square miles, slightly smaller than the state of Texas.

Population of the Japanese empire in 1940 numbered 105,226,101 persons, of which 73,114,308 persons were inhabitants of Japan Proper. Largest centers of population are on the main island, Honshu. The capital, Tokyo, which is also the business and financial center of the country, is second to New York as the world's largest city, with a population in 1940 of 6,778,304 persons. (Prior to the exodus during the war, London's estimated population was in excess of 8,000,000 however.)

Second largest city in Japan is the commercial and industrial city of Osaka, with a population of 3,252,340 persons. Nagoya is the third largest city with a population of 1,328,084 persons. Kyoto, the capital of Japan prior to 1868, has a population of 1,089,729, and the port cities of Kobe and Yokohama have 967,234 and 968,091 persons respectively.

Japan is mountainous, with most of the land suitable only for forestry. Only about 16 per cent of the total area of Japan Proper is arable. More than half of arable lands are devoted to rice production, and more than half of the value of farm produce is represented by this cereal. Approximately 2,000,000 out of 5,500,000 farms in Japan engage in sericultural activities. It is estimated that some 18,000,000 persons derive all or part of their incomes from the silk industry. Fishing, in which Japan occupies first rank among the nations of the world,

Four Flights Up

Rex, the cat, shown in the upper right section, has reached the top of a four-story clothes pole, and appears more comfortable than the ASPCA man who is trying to rescue the feline, while the neighborhood gives vocal encouragement. The incident, which took place in New York city, had a happy ending. Rex was saved by a special noosing gadget in the hands of the ASPCA official and still has all his nine lives.

raise costs to producers, and arbitrarily deny many dairymen the opportunity to sell their products in the most profitable market. There seem to be two basic troubles with milk inspection at the present time: (1) Lack of uniformity in sanitary requirements; (2) the refusal of cities and states to accept outside inspections. These are the same problems which have been met rather successfully in the case of grading. Mr. Waugh says that "greater uniformity is needed in sanitary requirements."

is likewise important as an occupation, and as a source of food supply. Although 50 per cent of the Japanese people still earn their livelihood from the soil, Japan has become a highly industrialized country. Abundant available water power is utilized to operate hydro-electric plants. The cotton textile, silk, rayon, woolen, metal, machinery, shipbuilding, chemical, electrical, and pottery industries of Japan rank high among those of the great manufacturing nations of the world.

Foreign Trade.

Only in a few products, such as silk, aquatic goods, camphor, does Japan occupy a unique position as a world supplier. For the most part, Japan has risen as an export nation and as an industrial power by the fabrication of goods from foreign supplies of raw materials. Raw cotton from the United States, British India, Egypt and other sources, carried to Japan, has been re-exported as cotton piece goods. Wood pulp imports make possible Japan's rayon industry. Wool from Australia and rubber from British Malaya and Netherlands East Indies also are essential raw material imports for Japanese industries.

Since July, 1937, no detailed data have been published in Japan on imports of mineral oils, ores and metals, fire arms, automobiles, explosives, certain chemicals, and certain classes of machinery. Since September, 1940, the publication of all detailed trade figures in Japan has been discontinued. For the first nine months of 1940 principal Japanese imports by value were: raw cotton, 396,487,000 yen; oils, fats, waxes, and manufactures thereof (principally mineral oils), 237,308,000 yen; beans and peas, 86,499,000 yen; coal, 85,543,000 yen; sheep's wool, 85,320,000 yen; salt, 49,057,000 yen; and pulp for artificial silk, 41,421,000 yen.

Farm Lands Sell Briskly as War Creates Demand

MINNEAPOLIS.—Farms are selling faster than at any time since the depression—selling to tenant farmers who can't find satisfactory land available for rent; selling to factory workers who want to raise part of their food; selling to inflation-minded business men and harried investors; and to city families who want a cushiony retirement spot in case of personal or national economic troubles.

Few present farmer-owners are adding to their acreage now because the combination of the draft and industrial labor demand is making it difficult for them to get enough help to operate the acres they already own. Therefore unimproved farm land generally has not shown the run-up in sales enjoyed by farms complete with buildings, according to this study by the Northwestern National Life Insurance company.

Improvement in sales of farms is nation-wide; over three-fourths of the farm realty agencies reporting in the survey, with sales offices in 32 agricultural states, report sales definitely increased compared with preceding years, with more all-cash deals, with adequate down payments easier to get, and with dealings active in the better class farms, instead of being largely confined to distress properties as in past years, the study finds.

Says the vice president of a New York farm realty company with sales agencies from coast to coast: "April, May, June and July of this year gave us the largest number of sales we have had during any like period in the past nine years. Approximately 30 per cent of the sales we are making are cash on delivery of deed."

"A great many people want to purchase fairly good properties that may be operated by a tenant or manager, with the idea that later on they may use this farm property as a so-called 'security home.'"

A Florida farm realty concern states, "We note that many city people who never thought of owning a farm are becoming interested."

From a Baltimore real estate firm: "We are literally flooded with inquiries for small farms and small country properties, and we find the supply to be scarce."

U. S. and British Airplanes May Be Decisive Factor in War . . . Substitutes Could Result in Japan's Losing Post-War Silk Market.

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—Britain has the Germans beaten with regard to fighting planes. America is producing the best bombing planes in the world. Britain is in production on these crack fighting planes. America is in production and rapidly approaching huge quantity production on the bombers.

That is the airplane picture of the present war. It is likely to be the decisive factor in its settlement. The British fighter is now so superior to anything the Germans have, and is being produced in such numbers—plus the fact that the training program for the men to fly and fight them is well under way as told in a previous dispatch—that any thought of the Nazis winning air superiority over Britain is highly unlikely.

It is interesting to note the reasons why Britain has excelled in fighters and the United States in bombers. The whole thought of the British has been devoted since long before Munich to defense—defense of their island—preventing of fleets of bombers from making a shambles of their country.

Hence they specialized on small, very fast planes with heavy gunfire, or, as the experts prefer to call it, fire power.

These planes not only had to be fast—with heavy fire power—they had to be able to climb quickly, so that when the fleet of attacking bombers, coming at high speed, were noted they could get in the air and attack them.

Whether they had long range or not was not important to the task contemplated. Hence they saved weight and added to speed and climbing capacity by reducing the amount of gas carried.

American Problem Entirely Different

Now consider the American problem, as it has been viewed ever since we took aviation seriously—or rather since the admirals and generals have admitted that airplanes are good for something besides scouting.

We planned a defensive war. So we wanted long-range ships—big ships that could fly long distances and deliver their blows and return. We sacrificed fire power and engine weight (speed) to this great desire for long-distance operation. A problem, the West Indies, Hawaii, and the Panama Canal gives part of the clue to this line of thought.

But without going into rhapsodies about this new British fighter let us consider some details. This plane is the new Typhoon. It will replace the famous Spitfire. Now the Spitfire had a speed estimated at about 420 miles an hour. We do not know how fast the Typhoon is, but observers have seen the Typhoons "walking away" from the Spitfires in speed bursts. The Typhoon is equipped with one engine, the new "Sabre" made by the Napier people of automobile fame. Experts say its horsepower exceeds 2,400, and a report to an American news service recently stated it was 2,350. Compare this with the Allison engine, which now has 1,350 horsepower, recently stepped up from 1,050!

Japan May Lose Post-War Market

Deprivation of her best silk market, by the banning of imports by the United States, may not deter Japan so far as this emergency is concerned. It may even drive her into that long-predicted war with Uncle Sam, which most of Japan's statesmen, and practically all naval officers, of the United States, and of other nations as well, have been expecting ever since the first World war.

But, reverting to the silk situation, Japan is likely to rue the day she crossed Uncle Sam so sharply, and not because of any TEMPORARY silk embargo. The point is that when this emergency is over, when this war is done, and Uncle Sam officially will welcome trade with Japan once more, there may be very little demand in this, the best market in the world, for Japanese silk. Or any other silk!

People who are compelled to use substitutes sometimes get to like the substitutes. This is not always true, of course. Most women in this country today would prefer to have silk stockings than any of the substitutes on the market. But the substitutes now being offered may be no more like the substitutes that will be offered when this war is over than the Model T Ford is like the 1941 version.

American manufacturers, more than any other class in the world, are given to improving products.

So long before Atlantic liners are steaming up the new St. Lawrence Seaway, this writer predicts, American mills will be turning out stockings made of substitutes for silk which will be as cheap or cheaper, and as good or better, than any hosiery derived from silk worms.

Young Alec was watching a house painter at work. Presently he asked:

"How many coats of paint do you give a door?"

"Two, my boy," was the reply.

"Then if you give it three coats," said the lad brightly, "it would be an over-coat?"

"No, my lad," retorted the painter grimly, "it would be a waste coat."

Benefits to Our Readers

THE PUBLIC nature of advertising benefits everyone it touches. It benefits the public by describing exactly the products that are offered. It benefits employees, because the advertiser must be more fair and just than the employer who has no obligation to the public. These benefits of advertising are quite apart from the obvious benefits which advertising confers—the lower prices, the higher quality, the better service that go with advertised goods and firms.

Vanished Men

By GEORGE MARSH

W.N.U. Service

THE STORY SO FAR: Bound for the Chibougamau gold country, six men lost their lives on the Nottaway river. Red Malone, Garrett Finlay, brother of one of the six, and Blaise, half-breed guide, arrive at Nottaway posing as surveyors.

"Here's a piece of their canoe Wabistan found on the shore and buried with them. There's a bullet hole in it."

Garry took the shattered cedar. "We'll keep that for evidence," he said, then followed Malone. While the others stood with bared heads he gazed into the shallow grave at the hovel a year had wrought.

"Bobby!" Finlay dropped to his knees and gazed at what had once been the younger brother whom he had carried in his arms; with whom he had shared his bed. "It's Bob and Andrew!" he muttered. "They shot them through the head!" He swallowed repeatedly at the tightening in his throat but the eyes he lifted to his friends were dry and hard. "He wore a ring of hammered gold! His mother—would treasure it. It's on the little finger of the right hand, Red."

Malone leaned over the grave. "The finger is—gone!"

Wabistan caught Blaise's eye and nodded. "Tete-Blanche is a thief! When he kills he steals."

"Good-by, Bobby!" Finlay's grief was too deep for outward sign.

"It may be weeks! It may be months! It may be years, Isadore! But some day you'll pay to me for that dead boy, there!"

The survey had been under way for two weeks. Two of Wabistan's sons were working for Finlay as canoe men and the old Indian often came to the camp with news of his secret search for Tete-Blanche, Tetu and Kinebik. But Isadore's private assassin and the medicine man had disappeared like river mist before the sun.

"Tete-Blanche is somewhere in the islands but none will say they have seen him. They have fear," announced Wabistan to Blaise as his canoe slid in to the beach one day in early July. "Your ears must be ever listening for he is waiting for a chance to strike."

"When he comes, we will fill him with lead," laughed Finlay.

The Indian scowled. "Like otta-wok, the gray owl, he will move in the night and when he strikes there will be no sound."

Finlay had mapped the head of the great lake and was working west toward the post.

It was two hours before dawn of a morning when Finlay had taken the last watch. Stars and moon were blanketed by drift. With Flame sleeping beside him Garry sat, back against a birch, rifle across knees, in gloom so velvet thick that it seemed to the man on guard it could be sliced with a knife.

"What a night for a stalk, Monsieur Tete-Blanche!" muttered Garry. "If you know where we are, you're missing a trick, my friend. But it'll be just too bad if this seventy pounds of dynamite smells one of you out and hops on him. You won't see him but he'll reach you—plenty! Eh, Flame, old partner!"

Finlay reached a hand to the wire-haired back of the sleeping dog beside him.

The airdale grunted with contentment and, for a space, lay sprawled over Garry's legs while the man he worshiped crooned into a hairy ear. Then, of a sudden, the iron muscles hardened along his spine and the coarse back hair lifted.

"He's winded something!" Finlay muttered, with a quick tug on the raw-hide running to the sleeping Red's wrist.

As two invisible shapes moved to Finlay's side the aroused dog split the thick silence with his brittle challenge.

"That'll worry 'em!" muttered Red. "Stop 'em in their tracks! Hear anything?"

"Not a thing! Flame winded them! You'd better stiffen up the boys while Blaise and I listen here." Red moved silently away while the enraged dog charged deeper into the forest.

"Flame'll keep them guessing, Blaise!" muttered Finlay. "He'll rip chunks out of the first one he noses out! They'll have no chance to shoot or use a knife on him tonight."

Presently Red returned. "The boys are all right. They're hot for a fight! Hear anything?"

"Flame's working this way, now! Hear that?"

There was the unmistakable sound of something moving through thick brush.

"He's nosed some of them out and turned them!" whispered Malone. "They're worried and don't know they're headed straight for us!"

"Where's Blaise?" asked Finlay. But Blaise was not beside them. "The cat! He can see in the dark! He's gone to meet Flame! You move over near the boys while I take the shore!"

Nearer worked the roaring airdale nosing out the trail in the night. "Strange," muttered Finlay, "they should make so much noise! From the way they travel they must be stampeded." Shortly there was a crash of brush in front of him. He raised his pistol. Then a heavy body flourished past.

"Hell!" The cocked gun dropped to the ground.

INSTALLMENT SEVEN

Finlay receives an anonymous letter suggesting that the six men were not drowned as reported. Suspicion prevails that Isadore, rich fur man, has made a gold strike and aims to keep prospectors out of the country at any cost. The three men start out on the Nottaway for the Hudson's Bay post. Finlay and Malone visit Isadore in his magnificent home. The three men located Bob Finlay's grave and found he had been shot through the head.

way!" He remained by his boat while the men back at the smudge fires rose.

"Bo'-jo!" returned Blaise, joining the young Indian whose nervous eyes watched Brassard's cag-like face as if he feared an assault.

"What's this, Red?" queried Garry as they followed Blaise to the beach. "A trick of Isadore's?"

"Sure! Wonder how he found us! We must be over forty miles from the post. Look! He's got a message wrapped in that skin he's handing to Blaise."

"He come from Isadore's place," explained Blaise. "Moise say, now, he see him at de trade. He carry dis lettair to you." Blaise handed Garry the skin wrapper the boy had given him.

"What do you suppose this is?" Garry asked Red. He opened the wrapper and stared in surprise at the folded sheets of blue note paper it contained. A faint fragrance met his nostrils.

Red grinned widely at the scowling Blaise. "Is this had a fast worker?" he chuckled. "I'll tell the world he is."

With mixed feelings of elation and suspicion Garry turned the closely written sheets and saw at the foot of the last page the name, Lise Demarais. Why had she written him? What was behind the sending of this boy forty miles to find the survey party? Again he saw her velvet-black eyes mock him, then furtively study him; later to fill with dread of the sinister face of Tete-Blanche peering through the doorway. He read:

"Dear Mr. Finlay: Louis, whose Indian name is Mikis, Little Eagle, is carrying this to you. He is absolutely trustworthy and devoted to me. I saved his life last year in the flu epidemic. No one here knows that he is searching for your camp. He is supposed to be away sturgeon fishing."

"Of course, I know, after what you saw and did with my glass that night, that you suspect Jules Isadore. Just why you are here on the lake I do not know. Jules thinks you are prospectors who have heard that he has struck rich placer bars on the Waswanipi and are going to investigate under cover of a survey of the lake."

"However that may be, I have got to make you trust and believe in me for without your help I am lost. First, I believe in you—that you're a gentleman and a brave man. Behind your banter there was something in your eyes, something staunch and unafraid. That is why I'm sending this strange letter; for your life and my future are at stake. Jules Isadore fears that you may know and report to the authorities. He's playing a desperate game for high stakes. He has ordered Tete-Blanche, the half breed you saw that night in the doorway, to follow your party until the chance offers to murder you—every man. Then he will send word to the railroad that you were drowned. But he can't let the Montagnais see this—have any proof. What has saved you, thus far, is the presence, with you, of Wabistan's sons. He doesn't wish to attack the treaty-chief's sons. He is waiting until the boys are away. Keep Wabistan's sons with you! I beg of you if you value your lives, leave this country before August."

"I've got to go with you. It's my only chance. If you'll take me to the Hudson's Bay post at Matagami, I can get out from there. Jules doesn't dare make trouble with the Hudson's Bay people."

"I realize to the full that you will suspect treachery—think I'm doing this for Jules and am a callous creature who would lure you into an ambush. But I beg you to trust me—give me a chance to tell my story—just one chance. I know this sounds wild, but I'm desperate. Just tell Louis the reply is: 'Yes!' That will be sufficient. And I'll be at the white sand beach, behind the lopsided point, two miles east of the post, early Friday afternoon. I swear to you I'll not be followed for it is Corinne's and my private swimming beach. We go often and Isadore has told them he'd shoot any man who was caught following us."

"Bring your men as a guard if you doubt me but I implore you, Garry Finlay, to meet me for I'm in ghastly trouble and you are my only hope. What I know will aid you in getting out of this country alive."

"Corinne knows nothing of this letter. She hates Jules Isadore but I dare not trust her. Louis cannot read English so is ignorant of its contents. If you say, 'Yes!' and anything prevents your reaching there Friday, leave a note under the white quartz rock on the edge of the beach stating when you will come and Louis will get it. For God's sake, Garry Finlay, don't think this note is an Isadore trick and I'm such a low beast. I'll kill myself rather than stay here through the summer. I've got to get out! I've got to get out! I've got to get out!"

The beast plunged on, followed by the airdale, and his hoofs clopped on the stones as he took the lake shore.

There was a laugh from the gloom. "By gar, Boss!" chuckled Blaise. "We need dat moose meat bad!"

CHAPTER VIII

The survey party were squatted on their heels around their supper fire screened from observation by shore alders and scrub. Young Moise Wabistan had just arrived with the rumor that Kinebik was secretly making medicine again and the Montagnais were growing restless.

"Were does he pitch his medicine tent?" asked Blaise.

"It is a secret for he fears my father."

"What are the spirits telling the Montagnais?"

"The spirits say that the 'Eye with Three Legs' you look through to make the picture of the lake is the eye of Matchi-Manitou, the Evil Spirit. Kinebik warns that the spirits tell him many Montagnais will die this Long Snows because the Eye has come to Waswanipi."

Blaise's face was shadowed with foreboding as he interpreted the reply to his friends. "Dat look bad for us! Kinebik make plentee troubl' wid dat story," he said ominously.

"The transit an evil eye!" Garry exclaimed. "Don't they see that Tete-Blanche is behind that?"

Blaise asked the question of the worried Moise, then turned to Finlay. "He say dat a child who watch you look through the 'Eye with Three Legs' has died. Kinebik tells them it was the Evil Eye that sickened him."

"Blaise," said Garry, nursing his chin with a hand, "I guess we'll have to put the fear of Matchi-Manitou into this medicine man or he'll soon have some of the Montagnais knifing us in our sleep. Isadore and Tete-Blanche are about all we can handle at present."

Brassard was doing some intensive thinking. At last he asked young Wabistan in Cree: "Have you heard when Kinebik makes his medicine again?"

"Some say when the moon is again round. My father will know when the secret word passes. His knife is already sharp."

Blaise nodded. "I will go with Chief Wabistan."

Moise and his brother, Michel, nervously found each other's eyes as Blaise repeated the conversation to the white men.

Later, they sat smoking inside the rim of the shore alders beside small smudge fires, for the mosquitoes were ravenous.

Blaise slowly removed his pipe and squinted into the west. At length he announced: "Cano' comin'!"

The others followed Brassard's pointing finger while Finlay went to the tent for his binoculars, returned and adjusted the focus. In the distance the dripping paddle of the canoe man flashed blood-red from the water.

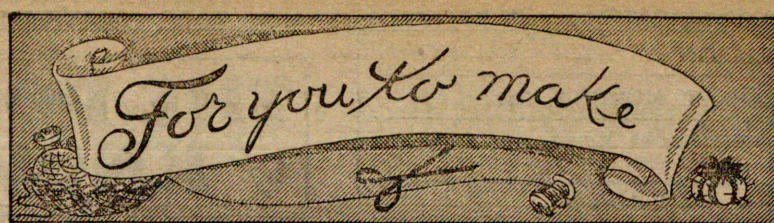

Later, from the shifting course of the boat it was evident that the paddler was searching the shores. Twice he disappeared to enter bays, only to reappear and continue his course.

"He hunt for somet'ing," said Blaise, when finally the canoe turned abruptly and headed straight for the camp. "Dat somet'ing is us."

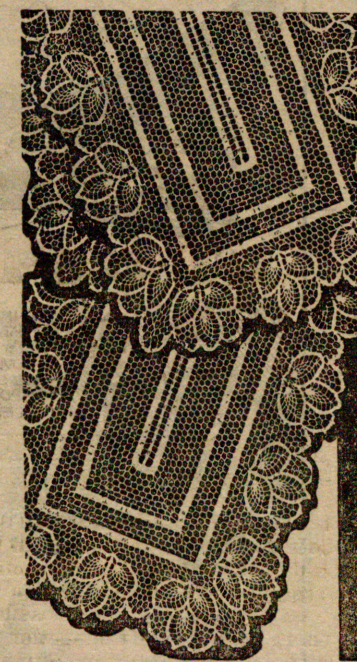

"Have a look, Moise," said Finlay handing over the glasses. "Do you recognize him?"

Young Wabistan looked through the binoculars and shook his head. "He's coming from Isadore's," observed Red. "Now what?"

The canoe slid in to the beach and the swart paddler, little more than a boy, stepped out with a "Kek-

Christ of the Andes

The year 1902 was a great peace year for the two great "A" and "C" South American republics, Argentina and Chile. Great Britain had successfully mediated a boundary dispute between the two nations which had almost turned the neighbor republics into two armed camps.

To cement the boundary agreement, Chilean and Argentine delegates agreed to a reduction of armaments May 28, 1902. The women of Buenos Aires commemorated these peace pacts by supplying the necessary funds to erect the huge bronze statue of Christ on the Andes frontier between the two republics.

"IN THE NAVY"

You will go down to the sea in ship-loads of laughs with Bud Abbott, Lou Costello, Dick Powell and The Andrews Sisters, starring in "In the Navy" which will be featured at the Roxy Theatre, at Lockport, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Abbott and Costello are much their hilarious selves in this laugh fiesta of the season, which outclasses "Buck Privates" by a wide margin. Powell is cast in the role of a radio singer, who joins the Navy, perhaps, to see the world through a port-hole, but discovers to his amazement, that he has caused quite a controversy being a radio star. This crew of funsters touch just about every part of music and comedy, when the Andrews Sisters stow away aboard a battleship and turn things up-side-down. Abbott and Costello, just two gobs, bring out the more human humorous side of the deck brigade. It's truly a roaring comedy, which should be added to your "must see" list.

The first human drama to lay bare a woman's mind is, "Shining Victory", with James Stephenson and Geraldine Fitzgerald, which will be featured at the Roxy Theatre on Wednesday and Thursday.

Friday and Saturday, the Roxy Theatre will present a superb twin billing of "Sunset in Wyoming" with Gene Autry and Smiley Burnette, and "Thieves Fall Out", with Eddie Albert and Joan Leslie.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Man" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, September 7.
The Golden Text was, "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God" (I John 3:1).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God: And if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ" (Romans 8:16, 17).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The Scriptures inform us that man is made in the image and likeness of God. Matter is not that likeness. The likeness of Spirit cannot be so unlike Spirit. Man is spiritual and perfect; and because he is spiritual and perfect, he must be so understood in Christian Science" (p. 475).

What's New in Cooking

by Gertrude Dent

"Season With Care"

EVEN the best food tastes better when it's judiciously seasoned. But remember that seasoning is for the purpose of enhancing the flavoring of food—not disguising it!

Certain seasonings bring out the very best qualities of certain foods, just as particular colors bring out the beauty of a woman's eyes, or hair, or skin. Cinnamon or nutmeg with apples are flavor affinities that can't be improved upon; sage with pork, is another. But do step off the beaten path, occasionally, and try something different; don't be a victim of the "one-seasoning" habit!

Try adding ¼ to ½ teaspoon of chili powder to the gravy of a plain stew; it turns an everyday dish into a culinary triumph.

Stews need long, slow cooking to do justice to their flavor and quality; remember that "a stew boiled is a stew spoiled." You'll find the deep well cooker of your modern electric range ideal for this type of cooking. Low, controlled heat maintains just the temperature desired, with a minimum amount of fuel; and a choice of five speeds provides the proper temperature for every type of deep well cooking.

Adding a bit of prepared mustard to the white sauce for macaroni and cheese, is a stroke of genius.

For "something different" to sprinkle on buttered toast, mix chocolate malted milk powder with sugar and cinnamon. Keep the mixture in a large sized salt shaker, within easy reach of your modern electric range; then, when you take the crisp, golden brown slices of toast from the electric broiler, spread with softened butter, sprinkle with the sugar-cinnamon-malt mixture, and you've something deliciously different to serve to the appreciative family.

Moist, delicately flavored, and golden brown—Ginger Cheese Muffins are a masterpiece of seasoning and baking. Just set the electric oven thermostat at 425°, turn the switch, and mix the batter as directed. The new electric ranges are marvels of efficiency and speed, and by the time your muffin batter is in the pans, the oven will be ready to bake and brown them to perfection.

Ginger Cheese Muffins (Makes 12-14 muffins)

2 cups cake flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon ginger
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup cheese (grated)
1 egg (beaten)
¾ cup milk
½ cup molasses
¼ cup butter (melted)

Sift dry ingredients together. Add grated cheese. Combine the egg, milk, molasses, and melted butter. Pour this mixture into the dry ingredients and mix lightly. Fill well-greased muffin pans approximately ¾ full and bake with the electric thermostat set at 425°, for about 15 minutes.

The next time you make gingerbread, bake it in a well-greased ring mold. When you are ready to serve the gingerbread ring, place it on a large plate and fill the center with canned fruit. It's a happy combination and children, particularly, love it!

Serve fresh pears peeled, halved, and sprinkled with powdered ginger.

A tea ball may be used for holding spices when you are making pickling syrups, when it is not desirable to leave the spice in the liquid.

MISSOURI'S LAKE-OF-THE-OZARKS AN OUTSTANDING TOURIST ATTRACTION

Region Served By Good Roads

Like a gigantic jig-saw puzzle, the famed Lake-of-the-Ozarks spreads itself over a strip of central Missouri 129 miles long to form an incomparable pattern of beauty. This great body of dark blue water, fringed by thickly wooded Ozark hills, presents a water surface of 95 square miles with a total shoreline of nearly 1,400 miles.

Lake-of-the-Ozarks owes its existence to man's ingenuity, for it was created only a little more than a decade ago when Bagnell Dam was constructed across the Osage River. Added to its utility value (the hydro-electric plant develops 201,000 horsepower), Bagnell can claim the distinction of having created America's largest man-made water resort area, with a seldom-equalled variety of attractions.

Five paved highways lead into the area, making it readily accessible from any direction, and a good system of gravelled roads serves even the most secluded resorts and hotels. This year, the Missouri State Highway Department has still further improved the road facilities by consolidating the surface on 25 miles of Missouri Route 5 which penetrates into and through the heart of the lake region.

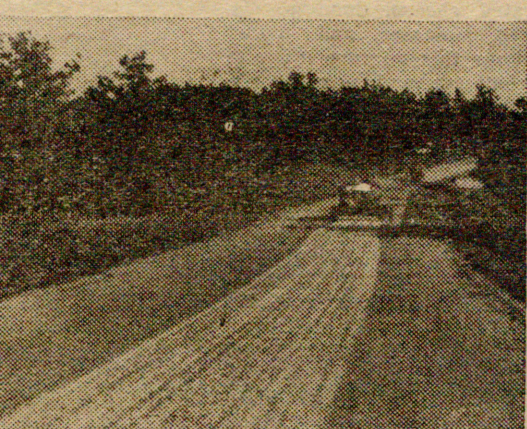

Following the practice which they have found so effective in improving nearly 100 miles of roads during the past several years, the Missouri State Highway Department consolidated the gravel already existing on the road by mixing in the proper amount of clay, and treating the surface with moisture-absorbing calcium chloride. The road materials soon packed tightly together and produced a smooth, dustless surface. A number of lakeside resorts have now followed suit and applied calcium chloride to end dust on their gravel entrance roads.

Good roads, superlative fishing, sand bathing beaches, marvelous scenery, invigorating air — are just a few of the reasons why Lake-of-the-Ozarks is fast becoming the mecca of fishermen, vacationists and nature lovers throughout the middle west.

Fjords of Norway may be larger but they are no more picturesque than the twisting, forest-edged inlets of Lake-of-the-Ozarks, as shown in this air photo.

Gravel roads in the region are kept smooth-riding and dustless the year around through treatment with calcium chloride, applied to the surface as shown above.

PALOS PARK

By DOROTHY ROBSON

Mrs. Frank Yunker and Mrs. Irving Pronger and Irving Jr. spent one afternoon last week at the home of Mrs. Charles Pantke in LaGrange.

Junior Robson of Chicago spent the Labor Day Holidays visiting his sister Dorothy.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Powell and family motored Thursday to Eagle River, Wisconsin to spend the holidays visiting Mr. and Mrs. Norman Powell at "Powell's Piney Point." They returned home Monday evening and reported a good time, although it rained every day. They say it has been terribly dry up there and the crops have suffered, so that the residents were glad to have the rain if the tourists didn't.

"School Days - School Days - Dear old Golden rule days" - Yes once again the old school bell is ringing and the children that didn't know what to do with themselves all summer, will now have to tackle those arithmetic problems and all the worries that go with "School Days." Weir and Palos Park Schools started on time, but McCord is being re-decorated and opening has been postponed until September 8. Weir school reports having one new pupil, a first grader named Ronnie Parrish, bringing the total to 8.

Mrs. Clara Mahaffey and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Mahaffey left by auto Tuesday morning for California. They expect to reach their destination, Los Angeles, by the end of the week.

The regular monthly meeting of the Palos Oak Hill Cemetery Association was held Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Sidney Traub in Palos, in place of Mrs. Edward Teason as stated in this column last week.

Mrs. Jessie L. Mains and Dorothy and Junior Robson visited Mr. and Mrs. Ray Robson Sr. and family in Chicago Sunday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Robson Jr. of Denver, Colorado, returned to spend a few days visiting his father and mother and of course, the country relation wanted to see them before they left. Ray, like his father, is a roofer and was transferred to Denver on a government job, and from there goes to Salt Lake City, Utah. They say it has been hot in Denver, only one does not perspire like we do here, and the nights are so cool that you need two or more blankets on your bed.

The monthly Wednesday Afternoon club meeting was held this week at the home of Mrs. George Lempera. Bunco and a lunch was enjoyed and prizes awarded to the lucky winners.

Agnes and Janet Weir report having quite a busy week. On Thursday they went to Joliet to Mrs. Ted Willard's home to help her make a quilt; on Friday they enjoyed a dinner at the home of Mrs. Edward Lehman in Harvey; and on Monday night they went to the Firemen's Carnival in Lemont, and Wednesday they went to the Wednesday Afternoon club.

Mrs. Hayes Treadway's mother from Chicago is visiting the family for a short time.

Mary Ellen McKibben has returned to their summer home on Powell Road after spending all summer on a Dude Ranch in Colorado. The family have gone back to Chicago so the children could attend school.

ALL during the summer, young eyes have been resting. They have looked on a warm, sunlit world where they were needed not for study, but for guiding the actions of a young body.

But now the school bell calls them back to a big job. They must concentrate on close indoor work, night as well as day. Eye tissues, nerves and muscles must work hard to make up for lack of summer sunlight!

Keep faith with young eyes. If there are any defects in their vision, consult an eye specialist. But above all, give your children adequate, proper, safe light... for studying, working, reading, playing. See that the lamps they use give good light over a wide area... are correctly shaded to protect the eyes from glare.

40 Years in One Location

This is one of Chicago's oldest and safest Building and Loan Associations. Serving the public for over 40 years without the loss of one single penny to the Depositors. They feature loans for homes insured by the FHA.

Fairfield Savings and Loan Association has enjoyed four decades of sound business. During these long years this institution has successfully expanded through periods of war, depression, inflation and deflation—periods that have shaken the very foundation of this country. TODAY the assets of the Association amount to the total of $1,151,917.26.

Two of the great civilizing forces which have helped to assure the superiority of the American people are owning one's home and the habit of thrift. These two functions are both provided for by the modern savings and loan association; therein lies its uniqueness and the pre-eminent place it has taken in our society. As early as 1789 such societies existed in Great Britain; the first American one was founded at Frankford, Pa., just outside of Philadelphia, Pa., in 1831. Since that time Savings and Loan Associations have been constantly increasing in importance until today they have attained a position of prominence such as the one held locally by the Fairfield Savings and Loan Association.

In carrying out its two functions The Fairfield Savings and Loan Association has made use of the most approved and simplified methods. They loan money on property within this area according to one of the simplest and least expensive mortgage systems known. Likewise, in the Savings Department any one of several convenient plans may be used.

In carrying out these two functions Savings and Loan Associations throughout the country are performing a valuable and useful service; it is far more than a mere matter of dollars and cents, it is making provision for the cornerstone of a sane national development, by providing for saving and easy home-owning.

For those who are buying or building homes or modernizing them this savings and loan association offers by all odds the simplest and surest way of financing it without fear of failure.

They also encourage savings with regularity and it is the best system of savings as their plan encourages industry and frugality, and is approved by the U. S. Government. One individual out of every eleven in the United States is a member of a Savings and Loan Association.

Our three papers found the Fairfield Savings and Loan Association to be the type and standing outlined above. At the present time it has an enviable record and is offered by able and careful men.

PAINT AND VARNISH MANUFACTURERS

Many Years Experience in the Manufacture of Paints. Producers of the Excellent WATTENAMEL Brands of Paints, Varnishes, Enamels, Flat Finishes, Roof Coatings and Other Paint Products. You Will Make No Mistake if you use Wattenamel Paints for Your Work

Quality in paint products vary to such an extent that an investment in anything but a reliable brand is economic waste.

Consumers have the fullest protection in paint and enamel purchases when they buy Wattenamel Brands of paints, varnish, enamels, flat finishes, roof coatings and other paint products.

New paint transforms the interior of the home more than anything else for the small amount of money invested, it restores to new life and interest old furniture that has become shabby, to say nothing of surface protection which is only possible when reputable brands, such as this company produces, are used.

Wattenamel house paints, recommended highly by painter-contractors, who note reaction of paints to weather elements, never crack or scale.

This is "paint-up clean up" time and the safest investment is your purchase of pure, honestly made paint products that will consistently resist wear, protect surfaces and retain richness and clarity, of color base like Wattenamel Brands.

There is all the difference in the world in the various brands of paints and enamels on the market today. Some of them are made for one time selling only, but the homeowner who looks to well-wearing, well appearing qualities is ever cautious against products that will scale or check, faults so often prevalent in products made for production only and not for quality and satisfaction. Remember the name of this manufacturer when you are purchasing paints and other paint products—it will pay you to make note of it now to go to this establishment when in need of paints, enamels, flat finishes and roof coating.

When inferior paints are used the re-painting job requires more time, because the low-grade paints must be removed if satisfactory work is to be obtained, but if you always use Wattenamel products this will never be necessary.

Mr. Edward M. Watt the head of the Wattenamel Company in Argo is well known throughout this section.

Help Yourself To A Party

It's informality, joviality, and even hilarity that you're after, a "Help Yourself Party" is the order of the day—or the order of the night, we should say! When your husband wants to entertain the fellows, when the youngsters invite the gang in after the movies or a swim, put out the "fixings" for the party and let them help themselves. If it's a stag party—put on your hat and give yourself a night out.

The party can head up in either the kitchen or dining room, as you prefer. Cover the table with a cloth of sprightly color and design, set out your gayest—but not your best—china, and provide plenty of paper napkins.

If you're planning the party especially for men, keep the menu strictly masculine; that means plenty of good plain food. You'll want at least three kinds of bread—white, whole wheat, and rye; some crispy crackers; and a whole array of sandwich spreads and relishes. That will include cheese, jams, devilled meats, chutney, cold meat, dill pickles, mustard pickles, sardines, and olives. Then, to give the host an opportunity to show off his ability as a chef, provide the fixings for broiled cheese sandwiches. Salted peanuts, popcorn, a bowl of fresh fruit, and plenty of hot coffee, complete the meal.

To avoid last minute confusion in the kitchen, have the coffee ready for cooking, in the pot. Plug the cord into the appliance outlet on your modern electric range, and set the timer to turn the current on at the desired time.

Broiled Cheese Sandwiches

10 slices bread
10 slices American cheese
1/4 cup chili sauce
10 slices bacon (cut in halves)
Watercress
Sweet pickles

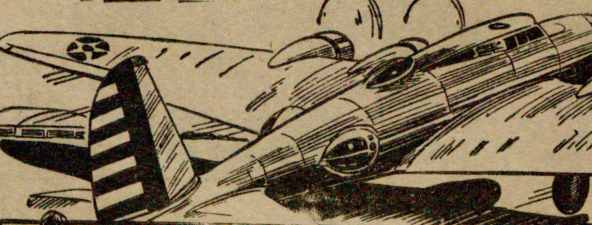

Toast slices of bread on one side only, in the broiler of modern electric range. On the untoasted side, place a slice of cheese, cut to fit the bread. Spread cheese with chili sauce, and place two strips of bacon on the chili sauce. Place on broiler rack. Set temperature control at highest point, turn switch to broil, and preheat until the unit is glowing cherry red. Place broiler rack in oven so that the food is about 4 inches below the unit, and broil, with the oven door ajar, until the cheese melts and the bacon is cooked. Serve with a garnish of watercress and small sweet pickles.

Broiling, in a modern electric range, is so simple that even "a mere man" can't go wrong on these delicious sandwiches. There's no smoking, no spattering of grease, and nothing can catch fire.

For a simple and wholly satisfying meal, serve the Broiled Cheese Sandwiches with a bowl of crisp green salad, and steaming coffee—and for dessert—a luscious fudge cake.

ADD ZEST TO MEALS WITH JELLIES AND RELISHES
(See Recipes Below)

LINE YOUR PANTRY SHELF!

As full of tang and zest as autumn are these recipes tailored to fit your canning cupboard. Crisp relishes, sparkling jellies, bright tomato catsup, and pickles of cucumber and peach—what a selection you'll have for making your meals a festive board!

Your pantry shelf lined with these sweet, spicy fruits and vegetables will be your line of defense, too, not only for meal planning but in working out a nutrition and food defense program. Generous supplies of fruits and vegetables now will assure you of plenty in fall and winter if you put them up.

Be sure to use a good quality cider vinegar to prevent pickles from becoming soft, tough, or shriveled. Good, full-bodied spices are also vital to successful canning.

*Bread and Butter Pickles.

(Makes 10 pints)
25 medium sized cucumbers
10 onions (medium-white)
½ cup salt
1 pint vinegar
2 cups sugar
2 tablespoons mustard seed
2 tablespoons ginger
2 tablespoons turmeric

Let unpeeled cucumbers stand in water overnight. Then slice cucumbers and onions and place in pan with salt (no water). Let stand 1 hour, then rinse off salt, add vinegar, mustard seed, ginger and turmeric. Boil all ingredients until peel turns yellow (about 40 minutes). Pack pickles in sterilized jars. Seal and allow to stand 10 days before using.

Remember those amber-colored watermelon pickles mother used to put out? I'm sure you do, so here's the recipe which rates high:

*Watermelon Pickles.

Thinly cut the green rind from watermelon, removing soft part of pink meat. Cut in pieces and cover with salt water made from 1 cup salt to 4 cups water. Soak 12 hours, drain and cook in boiling water until half tender, about 10 minutes. For every pound of rind, allow a sauce made from:

1 3-inch stick of cinnamon
8 cloves without heads
2 cups sugar
1 cup water
1 cup vinegar

Tie spices in a cloth bag. Cook all ingredients 10 minutes. Add rind and slowly bring to a boil. Remove spices. Place rind in sterilized jars, cover with hot syrup and seal.

Spice the fruits from your orchard or carefully chosen material from the market and you will always have something to add to mealtime. Served as a meat accompaniment, garnish or a relish whole, luscious fruit decorated demurely with

LYNN SAYS:

Cookbooks that will make a difference in your life and also a difference in your meals are worth looking into. Fall's a good time to look when you think of the many holidays in the months ahead and the entertaining you're going to do and the new ideas you'll need.

"June Platt's Party Cookbook," published by Houghton Mifflin, is a classic in that the recipes are given in a conversational sort of way as though your very best friend and best cook were giving you some of her favorite recipes. Here you'll find such treasures as corned beef and cabbage, veal kidneys in mustard, hot buttered scones, and strawberry and almond soufflé.

Dishes you've never thought of and touches that add real distinction to everyday food are given in "Mrs. Lang's Complete Menu Book," also published by Houghton Mifflin. Menus for every kind of occasion are given and recipes, too, for every one of them.

cloves, ripened and mellowed in heavy syrup, fills menu demands beautifully.

*Pickled Fruit.

(Makes 5 to 6 pints)
2 cups vinegar
5 cups brown sugar or
2½ cups each, brown and white sugar
2 tablespoons whole cloves
2 sticks cinnamon
4 quarts peaches, pears, or crab-apples

Cook sugar, vinegar, spices 20 minutes. Select firm fruit, remove the thin skins from pears and peaches, if using them, but do not pare crabapples, rather leave them with skins on. Drop in fruits, few at a time, and cook until tender. Pack in hot sterilized jars, adding syrup within a half inch of the top. Seal and store in a cool, dry place.

Concord grapes, deep purple, velvety, and plump with juice are one of autumn's favorite fruits. They lend themselves nicely to jelly, either by themselves or in combination with other fruits. As conserves, too, they will help you make menu magic.

*Concord Grape Jelly.

(Makes 11 medium glasses)
3 pounds ripe Concord grapes
½ cup water
7½ cups sugar
½ bottle fruit pectin

Stem the grapes and crush them thoroughly. Add the water, bring to a boil, cover, simmer 10 minutes. Place fruit in jelly bag and squeeze out juice (about 4 cups). Place sugar and fruit juice in large saucepan, mix, and bring to a boil over a very hot fire. Add pectin, stirring constantly, bring to a full rolling boil. Boil hard ½ minute. Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly into glasses. Paraffin at once.

*Grape Conserve.

(Makes 10 12-ounce glasses)
7 pounds Concord grapes
Sugar
2 pounds seedless white grapes
4 oranges, sliced thin
1 pound broken walnut meats
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
Stem the grapes; wash and mash slightly. Cook slowly until juice is free, about 15 minutes. Force through a sieve to remove seeds. Measure pulp. To every 4 cups pulp, add 3 cups sugar. Add white grapes, orange slices, cinnamon and nutmeg. Cook to the jelly stage. Remove from heat; add nutmeats. Seal in hot, sterilized glasses.

Putting up a batch of tomato catsup offers pleasure in more ways than one. You enjoy the luscious, spicy odor of the cooking, and the fragrance seems to permeate the house for days. You'll enjoy seeing the jars of rich red fruit on the shelves, and then again you'll like tartness of the relish as part of your meals.

*Tomato Catsup.

(Makes 5 to 6 pints)
4 quarts of tomatoes, quartered
2 large onions, chopped
2 cups granulated sugar
2 cups vinegar
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons whole allspice
½ tablespoon whole cinnamon
2 tablespoons whole cloves
1 teaspoon whole black pepper
2 tablespoons paprika
½ teaspoon dry mustard
Simmer tomatoes, onions, sugar, and vinegar 2 hours. Tie the allspice, pepper, cinnamon and cloves in a bag and add with the remaining ingredients, and continue cooking for another hour. Remove the bag of spices and force the vegetables through a sieve. Reheat to bubbling hot and pack in hot, sterile jars.

REVELATION: A MESSAGE TO PERSECUTED CHURCHES

LESSON TEXT—Revelation 1:3.
GOLDEN TEXT—Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life.—Revelation 2:10.

The Revelation is so little known that we need part of our first lesson for an introduction to the book. The fact that this is a "revelation" which God gave to Jesus Christ, "to show unto his servants things which must shortly come to pass" (1:1), should make us all eager to study it. But it is significant that there is a promise of special blessing to those who do read (1:3), and a solemn warning against tampering with the book (22:18, 19). Quite evidently God places great importance on the reading and study of this book. Can we do less?

The book is not easy to interpret, and men have differed greatly as to its meaning. There are four general schools of interpretation: (1) The preterist, which puts it all in the past. Since many of its predictions have not yet taken place, this view seems untenable. (2) The idealist, which regards the book as being entirely symbolical of spiritual principles. There is truth to this view, but it does not cover the historical events mentioned in the Revelation which are yet to take place in the world. (3) The historicist, which regards the book as mainly an outline of church history. This too fails to account for prophecies yet unfulfilled. (4) The futurist (which seems to be the best view); namely, that chapters two and three, while relating to actual churches then in existence, also outline the entire history of the church, and that the remainder of the book relates to future events. This is the interpretation which is largely held by conservative Bible teachers.

A brief outline of the Revelation is found (1:19) in the book itself:

1. "The things which thou hast seen" (John's vision)—chapter 1.
2. "The things which are" (the seven churches)—chapters 2 and 3.
3. "The things which shall be" (the six sevens; namely, seals, trumpets, personages, vials, dooms, and new things)—chapters 4 to 22.

Our lesson portion brings before us two of the seven churches of Asia—Ephesus and Smyrna—with their lessons for our day.

I. The Ephesus Church—Active but Cold, and Facing Judgment (2:1-7).

Following the salutation and the glorious vision of the Son of man (do not fail to read it, Rev. 1:9-18), John the apostle, who was the one to whom the vision came, is directed to write to the church at Ephesus, addressing it through "the angel" of the church. We do not know who he was, but since the word means "messenger," it may refer to a leading officer or elder.

The picture of the church at Ephesus was a very beautiful one. It was an active church, not afraid to work, patient under trial, commendably impatient with sin and worldliness. It was not afraid to exercise discipline, to discredit false apostles, and to stand against the evil works of the worldly-minded. There would seem that there could be nothing more said for a church, but there was a vital note lacking. In activity they were perfect, but they had departed from their first love.

What is meant by leaving their first love? "First love is the abandonment of all for a love that has abandoned all . . . The church at Ephesus was still a remarkable church, but it lacked the element of that enthusiasm, which in the eyes of the calculating worldling, is imprudent. There are some people who imagine that this lack of enthusiasm is an advantage. May God have mercy on such. I pray the day may never come when the heroisms and enthusiasms of first love shall cease" (G. Campbell Morgan).

Repentance was called for, or God said He would extinguish the light of that church. The lesson for us is that cold orthodoxy will kill a church.

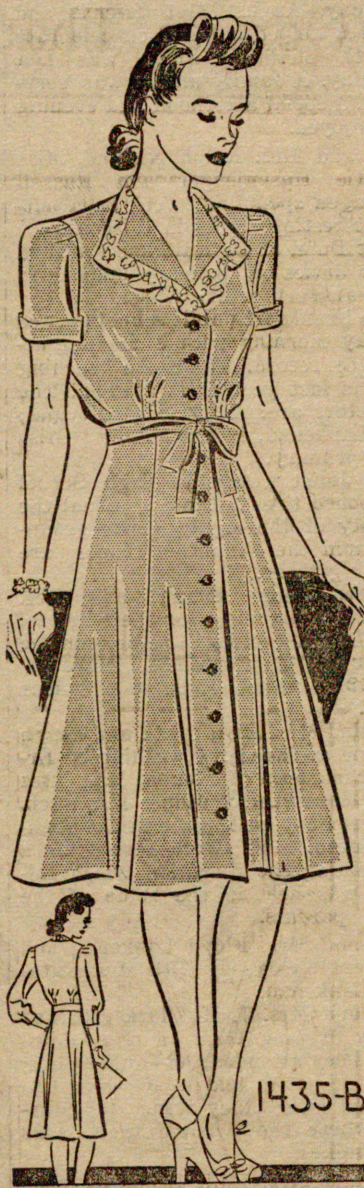

II. The Smyrna Church—Poor but Faithful, and Facing Persecution (2:8-11).

This is one of the two churches of the seven for which there is no word of rebuke, Philadelphia being the other. It was a poverty-stricken church humanly speaking, but rich in the sight of God. Such a church may be more useful to God and more precious to Him than a large church which is cold and indifferent.

What does He have to promise this church? Persecution. We who follow Him upon whom men spat, who was so buffeted and despised, yes, even crucified—shall we be surprised if a hostile world persecutes us?

Note that the Lord knew all about their sufferings, both present and future. He was with them and would continue to be with them, so they had no occasion to fear. Then at the end of their suffering there would be the crown of life.

PATTERNS SEWING CIRCLE

THIS is a dress you'll love for summer wear, because it buttons all the way down the front and may be put on and taken off like a coat. None of this tugging on over the head which you know is a bother on a very hot day. You can make it in fine silk crepes and it will be one of the smartest and most impressive frocks in your entire wardrobe. For this style is dignified by a very pretty collar arrangement—a ruffled edge collar to be worn under the dress revers, so that just the ruffling shows. Send for Pattern No. 1435-B at once, and make it your next new dress.

Make this dress in any pastel or dark colored crepe, or in a pin dot cotton or silk crepe. Then the contrast of a white ruffle around the collar will stand out prettily. If the dress is to be of a printed crepe the ruffle might be of Irish crochet or Valenciennes lace; if it is a plain color the ruffle may be of organdy or net.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1435-B is in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 takes 4½ yards 39-inch material, ½ yard organdy to trim. Send your order to:

New Land Areas

The 1940 census has issued completely revised statistics on the land areas of all states, the first remeasurement of its kind since 1880, reports Collier's. The five largest additions are 1,246 square miles to Texas, 1,151 to California, 1,145 to Maine, 1,058 to Mississippi and 743 to Oregon; while the five largest deductions are 992 square miles from New Mexico, 849 from Minnesota, 599 from Florida, 546 from Idaho and 541 from Wisconsin.

Tobacco tops the gift list with men in the service. They've said so themselves in survey after survey. A gift of a carton of cigarettes or a tin of smoking tobacco is always welcome, and more than welcome the week before pay day. Actual sales records from service stores show the favorite cigarette with men in the Army, the Navy, the Marines, and the Coast Guard is Camel. Prince Albert Smoking Tobacco is another popular favorite. With these sales figures and preferences in mind, local dealers have been featuring Camels by the carton and Prince Albert in the big pound tin as gifts preferred by men in the service from the folks back home.—Adv.

Thinking and Feeling

With most of us feeling dulls into thinking as we progress along the road, and woe to that man who has never learned to think, for if he lives into old age he will be a plague to himself and a nuisance alike to those who think, or feel.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination. Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body wastes. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

PRIVATE PURKEY WRITES HIS GIRL-FRIEND

Dear Nellie—
This is just to explain again that I am awful sorry about getting mixed up and sending to President Roosevelt the love letter I meant for you, and sending you the protest which I wrote for the President on account of a appeal from Senator Wheeler and which I wish I had ignored in the first place. Everybody has apologized in this matter now, including the Secretary of War and me.

Do not worry about what Mr. Roosevelt will think about getting a letter from me addressed to "Darling Nellie" and signed with two rows of kisses as he will know it was a error, and even if he did not know this he would be glad to get a letter from anybody these days that just expressed affections and not a lot of complaining. You say I never should of wrote no letter in response to the Wheeler postcard and I admit it, but I was just in a writing mood that day.

Well I wish I could see you often-er Nellie dear and if I ever get out of here I will marry you like I said but you can forget all that stuff about a little house in the country becuz after all the walking I have done all I want after this is a flat right near a subway or a block from the office so I will never have to do much on foot again for the rest of my life. You here a lot of talk about this being a mechanical war but you can't tell this to me with my feet in the shape they are in. It is no more a mechanical war so far as I can see than the Revolutionary War and my part in it is done just the same as at Valley Forge, except at Valley Forge the grounds was harder and there was not so many potatoes to peel.

What I wood give to be back in civilyun life where people still get a vacation in August! If you had of told me last summer I wood spend this summer without no vacation I wood of said you was crazy. In a army you get twice as much work in the vacation season as any other time and if you ain't come to a boil by noon you ain't rated as in perfect shape. If a jeep looks cool and dry all the officers get together and discuss whether to give him some new injections, change his diet, put him in the guardhouse or work him harder, and the last always wins.

There has been a lot of rain lately and I do not know witch is the worser, summer mud or spring and autumn mud, but I gess summer mud is more exciting as there are more turtles and snakes in it. Whoever said there was few snakes in America was nuts. I even found one in my bunk. In some of the mud I have been doing manovers in lately I wood not be surprised to come up with a wild duck in my shoes. I got everything else in 'em, but my dogs is so numb they don't feel nothing no more.

Well, this is not much of a letter to you Nellie so I will close now just to say you are in my mind always even in the heat of mimic battle and that even at night when I am nursing my feet witch are so sore I ache all over I think of you dear.

With oceans of love,
Oscar.

Some people think necessity is the mother of intervention.

Hitler says he has the Russians running around in circles. In other words he thinks "The Mujik Goes 'Round and 'Round."

The Vichy regime has also come out against hunting in its accepted forms. From now on all hunters must belong to one club controlled by the government. Maybe this is a natural outcome of the widely circulated report that a member of the Vichy government went hunting recently and encountered a rabbit. Instead of putting up a fight against the bunny, he entered into a collaborative agreement, the tale runs.
